

Stanford University VOICES Project

Work & School Stories

Do you have personal experience of psychosis?
Willing to share your experiences of psychosis & work & school (anonymously if desired) with young people?

What: Stanford VOICES is currently seeking out participants for our “Work & School Stories” project. The goal of the project is to generate a searchable database of profiles (personal experience & advice) from a wide variety of people with psychosis who see themselves as “successful” in their chosen vocational paths (scientists, entrepreneurs, social activists, chefs, graduate students and so on): your definition, not ours. Once complete, the database will be made available to young adults with psychosis from around the world. Please note that this is not a research study.

Our Rationale: Working adults with psychosis are largely invisible in society and this invisibility helps reinforce the myth that psychosis & success are incompatible (especially among young people who have recently experienced a first break). We want to change this.

Interested?

To participate in the survey directly click here.

To read more about the project and see an example survey click here.

If you have any questions or need help with the survey contact:

Nev Jones PhD

nevjones@stanford.edu