

SPRING 2016 EXCITING OPPORTUNITY

HEARING VOICES CREATIVE PROJECT

In partnership with the ...

wellcome
collection

- ★ Are you aged between 14 and 19?
- ★ Do you have personal experience of hearing voices?
- ★ Do you enjoy being creative and sharing your thoughts, opinions and experiences?

In April 2016 Wellcome Collection will open an exhibition called 'This is a Voice'. It looks at the idea of 'voice' from lots of different angles - sound, identity, body, psychology and culture. It's not just about 'hearing voices', but it's an excellent opportunity to really show people what it can feel like to experience hearing voices as a young person.

Wellcome Collection's Youth Programme is offering a group of young people with personal experience of voice hearing the chance to work on a group piece that will be displayed in their exhibition alongside other artworks and historical objects. Individual work will also be put on display in the Wellcome Collection's youth studio.

INFORMATION

- The project is free for all participants and should be lots of fun
- The project will be led by professional artist Hannah Hull
- You must be aged between 14 - 19 and based in greater London
- There are 12 places available and you'll need to complete a short application activity
- Your travel costs will be covered and you'll be given lunch and snacks during the workshops
- The six workshops will take place on Saturdays between February and March 2016
- Your work will be exhibited to our public audience
- This enrichment activity will enhance your CV and college and university applications
- This project will help build many skills covering the practical, creative and social.

What is Wellcome Collection?

It's a venue in central London near Euston station that is a mixture of art gallery and museum. They put on a range of exhibitions and events that explores what it means to be human. This is done by looking at scientific themes (such as sleeping and dreaming, the brain, skeletons) and then uses art to help us interpret and explore these ideas.

What is the Youth Programme?

The Youth Programme works with school, youth and community groups to encourage engagement with our objects and displays. Their age range is 14 – 19 and they also work with teachers and youth organisations.

How will I be supported on this project?

This project is run in partnership with Mind in Camden's Voice Collective. A member of our Voice Collective team will be present at every workshop. Also helping out will be a member of the youth team, Clare, and a fantastic artist Hannah who will both receive training from Voice Collective to ensure we understand your needs. Any questions, just e-mail info@voicecollective.co.uk.
